

The removal tool claimed in the above identified claims is generic. The tool is generically shown in FIGS. 116, 117 and a modification is shown in FIGS. 92, 93.

No traverse. Claims not specified herein do not fall within elected species. The inventorship is correct. The election set forth herein is consistent with the pending parent case. In the parent case, applicant generally elected FIGS. 30b and 30c, the locking insert disposed in the recess of the nut (FIGS. 30f, and 35e). The present case relates to a removal tool for use with various inserts.

Respectfully submitted,

Fleit, Kain, Gibbons, Gutman & Bongini, P.L.
